Summary

I have been fortunate to serve in various leadership roles throughout my career, starting from my early days in education to my recent positions in government and international organizations. My journey began with student leadership positions during my school years, which laid the foundation for my future endeavors.

In the realm of academic leadership, I served as the Rector of Universitas Paramadina from 2007 to 2014. This experience provided valuable insights into academic administration and institutional management. My government service includes roles as Minister of Education and Culture from 2014 to 2016 and Governor of Jakarta from 2017 to 2022. During my tenure as Governor, I was honored to be elected Chairman of the Association of Indonesian Provincial Governments. In the international arena, I had the privilege of serving as Vice Chairman of the C-40 Steering Committee, alongside the Mayor of London and the Governor of Tokyo.

Throughout my career, I've been involved in several community-oriented initiatives, including Gerakan Indonesia Mengajar (2009), Gerakan Indonesia Menyala (2012), Gerakan Kelas Inspirasi (2012), and Gerakan Turun Tangan (2013). These efforts aimed to address various social and educational challenges in Indonesia.

I am grateful for the recognition received from various institutions. I was named one of the 100 Global Public Intellectuals by Foreign Policy magazine in 2008 and listed among the 20 Future Leaders of the World by Foresight magazine in 2009. In 2010, I was included in the 500 Most Influential Muslims by the Royal Islamic Strategic Studies Center. More recently, I was recognized as one of the "21 Heroes 2021" by Germany's Transformative Urban Mobility Initiative.

My academic background includes a PhD in Public Policy from Northern Illinois University, a Master's degree from the School of Public Policy at the University of Maryland, and a Bachelor's degree in Economics from Universitas Gadjah Mada. In 2023, I was appointed to the board of the Asia Research Center at the University of Oxford, an opportunity for which I am deeply appreciative.

Throughout my career, I have strived to promote good governance, democracy, and anti-corruption measures. My commitment to these principles has guided my work in various roles, including as Chairman of the Ethics Committee of the Corruption Eradication Commission in 2012. I remain dedicated to serving the community and continuing to contribute to Indonesia's development in whatever capacity I can.

Gerakan Indonesia Mengajar

Founder

2010 - Present (16 years)

Jakarta, Indonesia

In 2010, I initiated and established the Gerakan Indonesia Mengajar alongside a group of colleagues. This program sends graduates to teach at elementary schools in remote areas of Indonesia, attracting university graduates to roles they might not typically consider.

The movement's appeal stems from a narrative that presents teaching in remote areas as a noble pursuit. Over 200,000 graduates have applied to become Young Educators, undergoing a selection process for the opportunity to serve in rural areas.

The program has three main objectives: driving sustainable educational change in remote villages, cultivating future leaders with global competencies and grassroots understanding, and fostering a social education movement across Indonesia.

From its inception, the movement has operated independently of government funding, relying on volunteer support and corporate social responsibility contributions. This principle of independence was maintained even during my tenure as Minister of Education and Culture.

Since 2010, the program has received applications from 204,607 Indonesian graduates, with 1,193 Young Educators selected to serve in 349 remote villages. The program continues to attract a high number of applicants.

The success of Gerakan Indonesia Mengajar is a testament to the collective efforts of all involved, from the Young Educators to the supporting staff and partner organizations. It demonstrates the potential of collaborative initiatives in reshaping perceptions about service and leadership among Indonesia's youth, building upon the legacy of the nation's founding fathers.

Pemerintah Provinsi DKI Jakarta

Governor of Jakarta

October 2017 - October 2022 (5 years 1 month)

Jakarta, Indonesia

During my tenure as Governor of Jakarta from October 2017 to October 2022, I oversaw the administration of one of the world's largest metropolises, with a population of eleven million. This role involved managing 180,000 civil servants and non-governmental workers, and an annual budget exceeding IDR 80 trillion.

A significant focus was placed on transforming Jakarta's public transportation sector. Over three years, the administration integrated all public transportation, doubled the coverage area, and tripled daily ridership. As a result, Jakarta became the first Southeast Asian city to receive the Sustainable Transport Award in 2021.

During the pandemic, the administration implemented science-based policies prioritizing safety and transparency. These decisions were grounded in scientific knowledge and evidence, sometimes diverging from central government or public opinion.

The administration worked on providing equal development opportunities for urban neighborhoods and enhancing the capacity of small and micro-scale entrepreneurs. Efforts were also made in various areas including public health, inclusivity, and city planning initiatives.

Notable projects included the completion of the Jakarta International Stadium and the implementation of integrated public transportation. Systemic innovations were also introduced, such as the Smart Planning system, achieving Unqualified Opinion accounting status for five consecutive years, reforming the student admission system, and prioritizing policies for vulnerable groups.

The administration's efforts received recognition, including the ASEAN ICT Awards Gold Medal and the Sustainable Transport Award. These achievements were the result of collaborative efforts between the Jakarta administration team and the city's residents, whose contributions were instrumental in implementing these initiatives and driving positive change in Jakarta.

C40 Cities

Vice Chairman

2021 - 2022 (1 year)

London Area, United Kingdom

From 2021 to 2022, during my term as Governor of Jakarta, I served as Vice Chairman of the C40 Advisory Board. The C40 is a network of mayors from nearly one hundred leading cities worldwide, focused on addressing climate change and promoting sustainable urban development.

The C40 network facilitates collaboration among city leaders, enabling the exchange of ideas and practices for creating greener, healthier, and more prosperous cities. It addresses areas including clean energy, sustainable transportation, waste management, and climate resilience.

I was elected as one of the Vice Chairmen of the Advisory Board, alongside Governor Keiko of Tokyo, under the chairmanship of Sadiq Khan, the Mayor of London. This marked the first time an Indonesian figure held a top leadership position within the C40 network.

This role provided an opportunity to contribute to global discussions on urban sustainability and to share Jakarta's experiences on an international platform. It also allowed for the exchange of insights and strategies with other world-class cities for potential implementation in Jakarta.

Being part of the C40 leadership emphasized the role of cities in driving global change and the importance of collaborative efforts in addressing urban challenges.

This position offered a chance to represent both Jakarta and Indonesia on a global stage. The experience provided insights into international approaches to creating sustainable, resilient, and inclusive urban environments.

APPSI - Asosiasi Pemerintah Provinsi Seluruh Indonesia Chairman

2019 - 2022 (3 years)

Jakarta, Indonesia

From 2019 to 2022, I served as Chairman of the Association of Indonesian Provincial Governors, concurrent with my role as Governor of Jakarta. This position involved leading efforts to foster cooperation among Indonesia's 34 provinces and promoting harmonious relations between provincial and central governments.

The association functions as a platform for provincial leaders to address regional concerns, share resources, and advocate for policies benefiting local communities. It facilitates dialogue between different government levels, ensuring provincial perspectives are considered in national decision-making processes.

During this period, the association focused on enhancing inter-provincial cooperation, sharing governance best practices, and addressing common challenges faced by provinces across Indonesia. Initiatives were undertaken to improve public services, promote sustainable development, and strengthen local economies.

This role provided insights into the diverse needs and potentials of Indonesia's provinces, offering a broader perspective on national development. The experience highlighted the importance of collaborative governance and regional autonomy within a unified national framework.

The success of these efforts was largely due to the active participation and contributions of fellow governors, as well as the dedicated work of the association's experts and staff. Their collective expertise and commitment were instrumental in advancing regional governance initiatives and fostering productive inter-provincial relationships.

The association's achievements during this period reflect the collaborative efforts of all provincial leaders and their teams, working together to address shared challenges and promote regional development across Indonesia.

Kementerian Pendidikan dan Kebudayaan (Ministry of Education and Culture Republic of Indonesia)

Minister of Education and Culture

October 2014 - July 2016 (1 year 10 months)

Jakarta, Indonesia

During my tenure as Minister of Education and Culture from October 2014 to July 2016, several initiatives were implemented to improve education and culture in Indonesia.

The ministry introduced the Education Balance Sheet, providing transparent performance reports on education for provinces, districts, and cities across Indonesia. This tool enabled stakeholders to track fund allocation, teacher quality, school conditions, and student performance more effectively.

Significant changes were made to the national exam system. The exam was repurposed as a tool for educational mapping rather than a graduation requirement. The ministry also introduced computer-based national exams, which were rapidly adopted across educational institutions.

To address the need for educators in remote and challenging areas, the Frontline Teachers program was launched. The ministry also led Indonesia's participation in the Frankfurt Book Fair, resulting in an increase in the translation of Indonesian literary works.

For cultural heritage preservation, an online registration system for cultural heritage items was implemented, exceeding initial targets. The Learning with Maestros program was another initiative that allowed students to engage with the creative processes of arts and culture maestros.

These efforts were part of a broader strategy to enhance education and cultural preservation in Indonesia. The success of these initiatives was largely due to the hard work and dedication of the ministry staff and educational professionals across the country. Their commitment and expertise were instrumental in implementing these programs and driving positive change in Indonesia's education and cultural sectors.

Kelas Inspirasi

Founder

2012 - 2014 (2 years)

Jakarta, Indonesia

In 2012, we initiated the Gerakan Kelas Inspirasi after observing that most schools focused primarily on teaching, with few emphasizing education, and almost none prioritizing inspiration. This movement invites accomplished professionals to return to schools as one-day teachers, sharing their expertise and its societal impact.

The response from professionals was overwhelming, with the initiative quickly spreading from Jakarta across Indonesia. The movement grew organically through self-funding and volunteer efforts in various cities and districts. I often remarked that goodness is contagious, with volunteers inspiring one another through their kindness.

Participating professionals find joy in reconnecting with schools and mentoring younger generations. For students, these professionals serve as inspirational figures, igniting aspirations. The emotional connections formed benefit all involved, fostering a sense of national contribution.

By 2023, Gerakan Kelas Inspirasi had reached 1,449 schools across 182 cities and districts in Indonesia. It's coordinated by 2,452 volunteer organizers, with thousands of professionals taking time off work to teach. This commitment demonstrates their dedication to contributing meaningfully.

The movement's organic growth has involved diverse segments of society, creating new partnerships between schools and educational supporters nationwide. Through Gerakan Kelas Inspirasi, we've aimed to showcase how ideas and narratives can inspire and positively impact both direct participants and the broader community.

Universitas Paramadina

Rector

2007 - 2014 (7 years)

Jakarta, Indonesia

As Rector of Universitas Paramadina from 2007 to 2014, I led a dedicated team in transforming the university's academic landscape. Our efforts focused on implementing innovative programs to enhance the educational experience and foster leadership among students.

One of our key initiatives was the Dual Transcript Program, which encouraged active student engagement in campus activities. This program resulted in graduates receiving both academic and non-academic transcripts, providing a comprehensive record of their university experience. We also introduced an Anti-Corruption Course as a core module, making Universitas Paramadina the first institution to mandate such a course.

Our commitment to integrity extended beyond our campus. We coordinated the Indonesia Integrity Education Network, uniting over 140 universities in the country to promote anti-corruption education. To support talented students from diverse backgrounds, we established the Paramadina Fellowship and Social Responsibility programs, offering full scholarships to high-achieving and economically disadvantaged students.

We expanded our academic offerings by launching Master's programs in management, international relations, and communication, with strong support from the business community. Our efforts to implement modern management practices garnered trust from various stakeholders, leading to increased financial support and campus expansion.

The university also became a hub for thought leadership, establishing several think tanks and actively participating in discussions on governance, economy, society, and culture. We fostered international collaborations, including exchange programs with Australia and New Zealand, to enrich our faculty's knowledge and cultural experiences.

Throughout my time as Rector, our focus remained on cultivating leadership, entrepreneurship, and ethics among our students, preparing them to make meaningful contributions to society.

Gerakan Indonesia Menyala

Founder

2012 - 2013 (1 year)

Jakarta, Indonesia

In 2012, we initiated the Gerakan Indonesia Menyala after witnessing the lack of reading materials in remote villages during my visits. This movement aimed to establish libraries in these areas, responding to the aspirations of Young Educators serving there.

We called upon urban communities to donate books, and the response was overwhelming. Within a short period, the movement spread to twenty cities, with 895 recorded volunteers and many more unaccounted for. These volunteers, often established professionals, were driven by a genuine desire to make a difference.

Over the course of a year, we collected more than 150,000 books. These were distributed to 115 remote villages, establishing reading corners and contributing to the creation of 36 reading gardens across Greater Jakarta. The impact was significant, providing these communities with their own libraries and reading spaces.

The movement's success was amplified by the voluntary contributions of logistics and cargo companies, who waived shipping costs despite the substantial weight of the book packages. This demonstrated how the right ideas and narrative could mobilize various parties to participate actively.

We named it Gerakan Indonesia Menyala (Indonesia Illuminated Movement) to symbolize how the knowledge in these books would guide readers from darkness to light. The establishment of libraries in remote villages was envisioned as a way to illuminate the nation, bringing enlightenment to its people.

This initiative exemplifies how a well-conceived idea, combined with community engagement, can create substantial positive change. It showcases the power of collective action in addressing educational disparities and promoting literacy across Indonesia.
